		TRAVEL JOURNAL	110

Travelling the Bregenzerwald always means having to overcome dizzy heights to start with: from Bregenz you take the Pfänder, from the Rhine Valley the valley side which ascends 500 m, from the north you take the Sulzbergstock, from the east the Riedberg or Hochtannberg pass, from the south the Furkajoch or Faschinajoch.

Up and over is the way to go – the most impressive views are from the north and the west – and a space is revealed which, in all its diversity, is completely different to all that surrounds it, with the Bregenzerache uniting it all. Your route takes you through gorges and flat hollows – wide between the hills of the foothills of the Alps around Alberschwende and Lingenau, narrow between the mountains of the foothills of the Alps around Andelsbuch and Bezau, squeezed in between the alpine peaks of the Kanisfluh, Diedamskopf, Zitterklapfen and Widderstein around Schnepfau, Au, Schoppernau, Warth and Schröcken. This correlates with the division into the Vorderwald. Mittelwald and Hinterwald (front, central and rear regions of the Bregenzerwald) – a topographical spectrum which, right at the start of tourism, had travellers extolling the "charming landscape" as an "enclosed park" whilst at the same time shuddering at the "Siberian exile" on the wild, upper course of the Ache. A valley area of contrasts, borders, crossings.

Crossings

Cross-border experiences also leave their mark on the locals - they know how to set themselves apart from outside. Yet the scarce rural areas have never been sufficient to feed the population. The locals had to get moving, cross borders, leave behind their homes and families. This took on many different forms: the nomadic existence of alpine animal husbandry (home, mountain pasture, alp  $\rightarrow$ page 96), or in the form of seasonal migrant work outbound commuting or even emigration (to America in the 19th century in particular). Flexibility, ideas and self-help were essential to stave off poverty.

The area was only sparsely populated for a long time: only plot names give rise to assumptions about the border between Celtic and Rhaeto-Romanic cultures. It was not until the High

View of the Kanisfluh

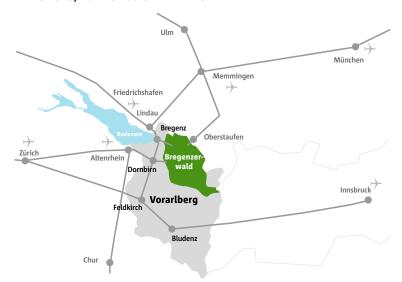

Middle Ages that Mehrerau Monastery in Bregenz encouraged the population of the area upwards of the Bregenzerache. From above, coming the opposite direction, you come across a second wave of population with the Walsers. The particle "Wald" (forest, wood) found in many of the names of places makes it clear how undeveloped this settlement area was for a long time. Naturally, the locals gladly take advantage of this remoteness: interesting as a hunting ground at best for the feudal rulers, extensive autonomy was allowed to develop which went down in literature as a "peasants' republic". It ended with the brief Bavarian occupation (1806 -1814) as a result of the realignment of Europe by Napoleon.

Hard cheese and lace

It was during this time that the region developed in the form you see today. Rational, mercantile methods gained importance in agriculture, desertedness became characteristic of the Vorderwald to the Mittelwald, production of hard cheese grew (alpine dairy  $\rightarrow$  page 96) to such a sustainable extent that the first dairy farm school in the Habsburg Empire was established. The new rulers were the cheese barons who amassed staggering wealth with the products of the new form of agriculture, and textile manufacturers who supplied material produced by the textiles home industry before the railway provided factories in the Rhine valley with workers after 1902. Such changes were also accompanied by resistance - Franz Michael Felder, author and spokesman of the revolt, is still considered an exceptional character (Franz Michael Felder Museum → page 89) in the valley today, and which is why one's own house and home are tenaciously clung to. New sources of income have to be continuously developed – the multitude of manual skills is proof of this.

This culture has succeeded in maintaining its vitality. Innovation and flexibility based on the acquired continue today in initiatives such as the Werkraum Bregenzerwald (→ page 82) and have turned the Bregenzerwald into a model European region.

O DIEDAMSKOPFBAHN

The perfectly groomed natural snow slopes on the 2,090-metre-high Diedamskopf are just as popular with experienced skiers as they are with families. The slopes in the clearly laidout skiing area are designed for all levels of ability and have been awarded the Vorarlberg Pistengütesiegel (Seal of Approval for Piste Quality). A particularly beautiful panoramic view over the mountains and as far as Lake Constance opens up from the summit, which can be reached on the winter hiking trail.

Special features

Diedams valley run

Those in good shape plump for the 10-km long valley run, which covers a difference in altitude of 1,250 metres.

Night-skiing in Grunholz

The T-bar lift in Au opens up two beautiful slopes with gentle gradients. One of the few ski lifts in the Bregenzerwald where the adventure of night skiing and tobogganing awaits. It's also possible to use the 3Valleyski pass on the lifts in the evenings.

Evening opening times: from end of December to begin of March – depending on snow conditions

Winter hiking and summit happiness

Hikers and fans of nature can enjoy varied experiences on the Diedamskopf. A leisurely walk of just 15 minutes leads from the mountain station to the Diedamskopf summit at an altitude of 2,090 metres.

For families and children

The Diedamspark is an insider tip in the boarder and free-skier scene. With more than 30 different obstacles - starting with simple butter boxes and Jib obstacles up to a 10-metre kicker or a wave rail - the Diedamspark is one of the big parks in the Bregenzerwald. The four different sections mean that creativity knows no bounds. While the little shredders can find their feet in the Beginner Area, the pros can enjoy themselves in the Medium Area. Skilfully built from the finest natural snow by the Q-Parks Shape Crew. Snowboarders and free-skiers love the Diedamspark for its perfect park terrain.

TIP: SKIING AREA FOR FAMILIES

Located away from the hustle and bustle of large skiing areas. Small yet exquisite skiing area, ideal for families with small children. Plus: racing service and three racing tracks for club, association or company races FIS-homologated slalom run for men and women.

The gondola ride takes just a few minutes to get from the valley to the lofty heights where the reward is a breathtaking view and a winter landscape that enchants. The cable car can take up to 60 passengers. It comfortably and quickly makes the 930-metre climb from Bezau up to Baumgarten at 1,648 metres.

OFFERS ON THE MOUNTAIN

Winter hiking

- Sonderdach circular route: around 50 minutes' walking time
- Middle station mountain station: around 1½ hours' walking time
- Panorama trail to the Niedere-Höhe: around two hours' walking time

Tobogganing

- Natural three-kilometre-long toboggan run from Baumgarten to the Sonderdach
- Altitude difference: 440 metres
- Toboggan hire at the valley station and at the panorama restaurant

Skiing tours

The Baumgarten mountain station is the ideal starting point for skiing tours into the Niedere-Winterstaude area.

Freeriding

The firn descents to the Sonderdach on the Bezau side are particularly popular.

Paragliding

This special thermal location makes flying on the Niedere possible all year round. Paragliders can start on the Bezau side towards the south or on the Andelsbuch side towards the north-east. There are generous landing fields in the valley on both sides.

Panorama restaurant

The restaurant, like the cable car, is barrier-free and accessible for the disabled. The observation deck on the restaurant's roof presents an impressive panoramic view.

INFORMATION & RESERVATION ski!Projekt M +43 (0)664 4205221 www.skiprojekt.at

The Bregenzerwald is famous for its wide range of enjoyable skiing tours, comprising the gentle through to the more arduous. Following an ascent taking 2 to 5 hours on cross-country skis and skins, swing down the magnificent slopes off the prepared pistes and down into the valley. You can rent the appropriate equipment such as skis and avalanche search equipment from the local ski rental shops.

We recommend that you only embark on these tours in the company of the ski schools' mountain and skiing guides. This way, you'll safely reach the loveliest places, and receive valuable tips on the way.

Safety tips for off-piste skiing

Please note that you are skiing at your own risk! This brochure only contains suggested routes.

- Off-piste skiing is fun when you master the technique. The Bregenzerwald ski schools offer courses to this end.
- The correct equipment and clothing are essential safety factors.
- Anyone skiing off piste needs avalanche equipment (avalanche search equipment, probe, avalanche shovel, First Aid kit) and also needs to know how to use such equipment!
- Never set off too late. In winter, it starts getting dark at 4.30 p.m.
- · Never set off if it is snowing/foggy.
- The skiing and mountain guides are familiar with the place and terrain and ensure that you safely reach your destination – and back home

EMERGENCY TELEPHONE NUMBERS (FREE OF CHARGE)

- 112 European emergency number
- 144 alpine emergencies

VORARLBERG AVALANCHE WARNING SERVICE

Avalanche report available for free: (Avalanche Report Subscription) www.vorarlberg.at/lawine

Respect your boundaries

However, anyone out and about enjoying the countryside needs to keep in mind that it is also a very sensitive habitat for plants and animals which is worth protecting. Please don't take any short-cuts through forest paths, since they are often used by wild game as a refuge. Moreover, the edges of skis and snowboards can easily damage the young forest. Observe the no-go hunting areas and, if necessary, choose a different tour destination. It is with this in mind that we also appeal to you to respect preservation and conservation areas and to observe any restrictions.

How about a lantern-lit ramble at dusk? Visits to the farm afford fascinating insights into the living environment of the farmers.

Tobogganing - a great pleasure

The Bregenzerwald boasts the best conditions for enjoyable family holidays. Friendly hosts in the hotels, guest houses, holiday apartments and on the farms offering holidays ensure the right setting for this.

Tobogganing with children

Almost all towns and villages have one or several toboggan runs, many of which are illuminated in the evening. This includes many runs which children can ride alone, or on their parents' toboggan. Toboggans are available for rent in many towns and villages. The starting points of several toboggan runs can be easily reached by lift ( $\rightarrow$  page 68).

Well-supervised in the ski schools

The Bregenzerwald's ski schools are well-known for their child-friendly programmes. You can find further information on selected offers in the chapter Ski and Board  $(\rightarrow page 5)$ .

Village lifts for young skiers

The clearly laid-out village lifts are ideal for families:

Au: Grunholz ski lift ( $\rightarrow$  page 17)

Bizau: Hütten rope tow Buch: Buch ski lifts

Hittisau: Hittisberg ski lift

Reuthe: Reuthe Baienberg ski lift

Schoppernau: Ahorn ski lift ( $\rightarrow$  page 17)

ACTIVE WINTER

There are various ways to explore the winter landscapes. Hiking and tobogganing, for example. Or guided snow shoe tours. By horse-drawn sleigh or horse-drawn carriage or being pulled along by a team of huskies.

Winter hiking on the Diedamskopf

There are plenty activities for those whose winter enjoyment is found away from the piste. Winter hiking paths guide you through picturesque landscapes and to lovely viewpoints.

SIGNPOSTS

Winter hiking paths throughout the whole of the Bregenzerwald are clearly signposted in an easily visible pink.

NOTES ON SAFETY

 Make sure that you have the right equipment with you, such as adequate, waterproof footwear (e.g. climbing boots) and warm outerwear. Further useful items include: headgear, gloves, snow goggles or sunglasses, sun screen. "Shoe chains" prevent slipping on ice and snow: they are available from shoe shops and sport shops. Sticks are also helpful.

TIP: WINTER HIKING AT WWW.BREGENZERWALD.AT

Tour tips, packages and interesting facts

- Stick to the signposted hiking paths (pink signposts).
- Taking short steps and maintaining an even pace going uphill save your strength, and go easy on the joints going downhill.
- Slightly bending your upper body forwards when going downhill reduces the danger of slipping.
- · Take plenty of drinks with you.
- Ask your hosts about the weather forecast.

Negrelli's church and endless views -Sulzberg mountain path

From Wellnesshotel Linde, Schönenbühl (820 m), a cleared agricultural path, or, if snow is plentiful, a hiking piste, leads to the mountain farms in Unterköhler: from there, you take a flattened hiking path to the Oberköhler plot of land at 985 m, then you follow a forest path to the approach road on the sunny side to Sulzberg, which you then follow on past the parish church to Sulzberg village square (1,013 m) with endless views across the Bregenzerwald. On the way back, you pass the sports field in Buch, then take the hiking piste back to the Hotel Linde.

STARTING POINT

Sulzberg-Schönenbühl CULTURE ON THE ROUTE

As the "village on the mountain", the location of Sulzberg in Vorarlberg gives it a very special quality of its own. The parish church in the Empire style is exceptional. It was built in 1828/29 by Alois Negrelli, the designer of the Suez Canal. CHARACTERISTIC

Out and about on the Hochhäderich

Across the upland moor – the Hochhäderich circuit

The route follows almost completely flattened hiking trails through the mountain valley basin between the Nagelfluh ridges of Hochhäderich and Kojen-Fluh. It takes you from the Hochhäderich car park (1,227 m) across the Austrian-German border, and takes you up to the plateau of the Hörmoos alp (1,270 m). From there, you go downwards for a while to the Hochwies alp (1,230 m), then to the Glutgschwanden alp (1,200 m) and finally back to the starting point via the Moos alp (1,224 m).

STARTING POINT

Hochhäderich car park
CULTURE ON THE ROUTE

The cross-border circuit connects the Bregenzerwald with Oberallgäu, i.e. Vorarlberg with Bavaria. Between the approach road and the Moos alp, the blanket of snow conceals the Kojenmoos, an upland moor which has been widely preserved and which is protected. The Riefensberg locals used to cut peat here, and convey it into the valley via a material ropeway.

Panorama hike – Bödele-Schwarzenberg

From the bus stop on the Bödele (1,140 m), take a short walk along the road to Schwarzenberg where you pick up the winter hiking path. Cross the pistes of the Hochälpele lift, hike through alpine forests to the Hochälpele alp /Niederälpele (1,250 m, extensive views across the Bregenzerwald) and continue to Lustenau hut (1,250 m, chance to take a detour to the Bregenz hut). From Lustenau hut, take a scenic path across the Klausberg mountain pasture down into Schwarzenberg (695 m).

STARTING POINT

Bödele

CULTURE ON THE ROUTE

It was on the Bödele, close to Losen pass, an ancient crossing into the Rhine Valley, that Otto Hämmerle, an industrialist from Dornbirn, erected a countryside summer resort. After the Arlberg, the Bödele is the second birthplace of Vorarlberg skiing (in 1903/1904 a ski jump was built, and the first ski race was held. In 1907, the first ski lift in the world was built here).

Where cattle graze in the summer – Schetteregg circuit

The entire route follows flattened hiking trails. It takes you from Schetteregg (1,066 m) to the alpine pasture area of Eggatsberg and Hammeratsberg, with the lovely Bregenzerwald mountain pasture huts. You soon arrive at the Untere Falz alp, where you get lovely views of the southern mountains of Bullerschkopf and Winterstaude (1,877 m). The route now takes you up to the Obere Falz alp and continues into the Ochsenhof alp area. Your return trip is rewarded with lovely views of Schetteregg and the foreland of the Bregenzerwald.

STARTING POINT

From the Krähenberg car park, the road descends steeply to Bilgeri's snack bar in Krähenberg. The flattened winter path starts here (keep on the cross-country ski run). Crossing a narrow gorge with impressive views down to the Subersach is a lovely experience. The valley soon reveals itself, and the beautifully located mountain pasture settlement of Schönenbach (1,025 m) is in front of you.

STARTING POINT

Car park at Krähenberg ski lift CULTURE ON THE ROUTE

Schönenbach is one of the loveliest, largest mountain pasture settlements. It was mentioned for the first time in 1491, comprises over 25 huts and one chapel. Tandem flight

The Bregenzerwald flying area (Niedere close to Bezau-Andelsbuch and Diedamskopf close to Au-Schoppernau) is well-known for its laminar upwind and its pleasant thermal conditions.

The special thing about it is that an increasing number of flight/training areas can be offered within 10 km with each (wind) direction. The proximity and the easy accessibility of both flying areas ensure that training is both flexible and fast. On the Diedamskopf, you can take off towards the southerly, south-easterly and easterly directions across alpine, steep terrain.

From the approx. 10° in the pullup area, the take-off area continually passes into a steep slope. Two take-off ramps are available for hang-gliders.

Also on offer: tandem flights.

Andelsbuch – themed trail "Flugmeile"

The Flugmeile Andelsbuch ('Air Mile') is a new themed trail that aims to shorten the distance between the village centre / bus stop to the Andelsbuch cable car's valley station by offering lots of interesting information about paragliding. Seven stations provide information about local conditions, historical developments, achievements and much more. The Flugmeile also has lots to interest young visitors because 'Andi' – half man, half bird – accompanies them with puzzles and games along the trail.

FOREST

From sycamore to silver fir, from rare upright mountain pine to beech: the Bregenzerwald's landscape stands out for its very different types of forest. Bog forests, gorge forests, alpine forests and – something that's particular to the Bregenzerwald – continuous cover forests. The best way to explore the green recreational areas is by hiking and specialised programmes.

Sycamore tree in the Damüls-Mellau ski area

Around 1,000 years ago, the region now known as the Bregenzerwald was largely covered with trees. That's also probably how the Bregenzerwald came to its name. Today, around 40% of the Bregenzerwald with its 23 villages is forest. The forests are very important to the Bregenzerwald and its cultivated landscape and show how sustainability is actually being lived in the region.

The forest shapes the landscape and makes the changing seasons apparent. Many trees come into bloom in spring and provide shade and protect from the heat in summer. Then they display of a wide range of different colours during the autumn before presenting their romantic side in the snow-covered winter landscapes. People take pleasure from forests throughout the year. Forests are a benefit to health, are the habitat for many species of plants and animals and protect villages from avalanches, landslides and floods. They act like air-conditioning systems and constitute the source of the raw materials that architects and craftspeople are able to employ so skilfully.

Specifics of the Bregenzerwald's forests

All forests in the Bregenzerwald are held in (small-scale) private ownership. They're not the property of the government as is usually the case in other states in Austria. The predominant species of tree are spruce, beech and silver fir. Silver fir makes up to 80% of the forests in the Lower Bregenzerwald. Careful observers will notice how different the forests look depending on where they're located.

- Bog forests are typical for such places in the Lower Bregenzerwald as Langen, Sulzberg, Krumbach and Sibratsgfäll as well as the Bödele. These are characterised by shrubby growths, birch and mountain pine, which grow upright there. These are usually found more in France and Switzerland but, in Austria, they're only encountered in Vorarlberg.
- The Bregenzerache valley and its side valleys, e.g. the Argenschlucht near Au and the Mellental near Mellau, are characterised by gorge forests. The air here is usually more humid, which favours the growth of sycamore, ash, mountain elm, yew and silver fir there.

- Alpine forests, which extend up to altitudes of around 1,900 metres, consist mainly of spruce. High-altitude mountain trees, such as larch and Swiss stone pine, hardly grow in the Bregenzerwald. They're too sensitive to snow.
- Beech forests thrive in a special geological zone that's to be found in the area between Andelsbuch and Mellau, which is indicated by the name of 'Andelsbuch' ('Buche' being the German for 'beech').
- Sycamore grows in many places. Particularly beautiful specimens are to be found on alpine pastures in the Mellental valley near Mellau where they provide shade for the cows. In the past, alpine herders used to stuff the leaves from these trees into their bed covers.

Feature: continuous cover forests and sustainability

The Bregenzerwald is characterised by its many areas where continuous cover forests grow. This is special because only around 2% of the wooded areas in Austria are managed as continuous cover forests. Such forests have a primeval look about them. Old and young trees grow together apparently at random. Mainly silver fir, spruce and beech in the Bregenzerwald. But they're carefully managed forests where different species, sizes and ages of tree are allowed to grow. The forest managers' task is to occasionally but regularly fell large old individual trees to allow young trees to grow back in the wells of light created in this way. That means that they don't have to invest effort and money into planting young trees. Continuous cover forests rejuvenate themselves through a process of 'natural regeneration'. The creation of such forests is considered the high art of forestry management because it takes profound knowledge and lots of experience to do the right thing there. Areas with continuous cover forests play a very important role in the preservation of biodiversity. They're also significantly more resilient to the effects of climate change. Woods with continuous cover forestry are better able to cope with the harmful effects caused by, for instance, drought and storms and such pests as fungi and bark beetles, than forests consisting primarily of one species of tree.

Forest and health

Forests are not only important to nature, plants and animals. They're also extremely valuable for the environment and for us humans. Studies have shown that spending time in forests delivers health benefits. The calm, the clean air, the surrounding greens and terpenes, i.e. the fragrances from trees, contribute greatly to well-being. Anybody wanting to put that claim to the test should just head out into the woods or take part in one of the activities that are supervised by the region's expert guides.

Forest and design skills

Forests in the Bregenzerwald play an additional important role. The wood from the different trees represents a consistent, renewable and ecological source of raw material that contributes greatly to how value is created in the region. The wood keeps sawmills in business - there's a sawmill in almost every municipality. Architects use the wood to build houses and design façades, while skilled workers produce furniture and accessories, including shoes and clogs known as 'Hölzlar', from it. More wood grows in the Bregenzerwald than is used. Building with timber has a long tradition in the Bregenzerwald. That's demonstrated by the many buildings that feature wooden shingles and interiors that boast wooden panelling. Wood from spruce is primarily used for shingles and from silver fir for interiors. Wood from silver fir has the advantage that it doesn't exude resin.

Forest and climate

Forests and wood are hugely important to the climate and the environment. Wood is a CO2 sink and therefore helps remove CO2 from the atmosphere. Practical examples include timber façades, which store considerable amounts of CO2. Wood, provided it isn't treated before being used and worked, is 100% recyclable or combustible. Large areas of forest act like airconditioning systems. They cool the atmosphere and purify the air. Forests with a wide range of different species of tree, varied structures and good rejuvenation – especially where continuous cover forestry is employed - are better able to withstand global warming. Wood as a renewable raw material provides environmentally-friendly energy: almost every municipality in the Bregenzerwald operates one or even several biomass heating plants. The local heating plants in such municipalities as Damüls, for instance, deliver around 95% of the energy needed there for heating and hot water. More insights are provided during the guided tours of the biomass heating plant in Au.

Forests and dining

Forests are also a source of many delicacies that range from mushrooms through berries and herbs to venison. Pine-top honey is another forest speciality. Special dishes and oils may be flavoured with herbs from the forest as well as with fir and spruce needles.

TIPP: FORESTS AT WWW.BREGENZERWALD.AT

Forest hikes, guided forest excursions, adventure and wellness in the forest, architecture and crafts and trades

A magnificent cultural landscape, awarded the much-coveted designation "nature park", developed between Bregenzerwald and Allgäu over the course of several centuries. Today, 15 communities (eight of which are in the Bregenzerwald), are involved in the first cross-border park between Austria and Germany.

Alpine meadows with 290 different species of plant, valuable upland moors, forests of white firs and ravine forests and an alp density unmatched anywhere else in Austria are characteristics of the nature park. A connecting element is the impressive Nagelfluh range, which crosses the nature park from the west to the east. Great differences in altitude, geologic diversity, sustainable alp farming - all of this resulted in the creation of a large number of various living environments on a relatively small surface. During the winter, the easily accessible mountains in the nature park are an ideal destination for snowshoe hikers, backcountry skiers and lovers of nature. With its Dein Freiraum. Mein Lebensraum (Your Space.My Habitat) and Respektiere deine Grenzen (Respect Your Boundaries) tourist information campaigns, the nature park has for many years been successfully promoting the fact that habitat protection and environmentally friendly winter sports are not mutually exclusive.

The Nagelfluhkette Nature Park ...

- ... is the first and so far only transnational nature park that covers areas in both Austria and Germany.
- ... is, with 405 square kilometres, a large international protected area.
- ... combines eight municipalities from the Lower Bregenzerwald with seven Allgäu municipalities.
- is a hotspot for biodiversity. Rare animal and plant species still live here, such as the Apollo butterfly or the wood pink.
- takes its name from the impressive Nagelfluhkette, a mountain range that forms the heart of the nature park.
- ... has, with more than 500, a high density of alpine meadows.

Respectful use

Those who set out in the nature park on skis, on snowshoes or simply on foot will find our overview boards at the starting points to popular winter destinations. The protected zones have also been identified along with the routes on a map. The board also indicates which protected zone benefits from respectful routing. Green directional signs can be found on frequently used tours at prominent points in the landscape; these mark the official route that avoids the protected areas. Visitors following these signs will always be in the 'green area'. But those who nevertheless find themselves in front of a 'stop sign' will easily be able to find their bearings again on the map and will know that a protected zone lies ahead. These protected zones have been carefully defined in cooperation with winter-sports enthusiasts, land managers and our partners from forestry and hunting. Accordingly, we also always try to find a sensible compromise between attractive routes and the protection of habitats. With a little luck, you'll also be able to chat with one of our rangers during your exploration of the terrain. They're are always happy to talk. More information and interactive maps for planning your winter tours in Vorarlberg and the Nagelfluhkette Nature Park in a nature-friendly way are available at www.respektiere-deine-grenzen.at (Respect Your Boundaries) and www.freiraum-lebensraum.info (Your Space.My Habitat). (www.freiraum-lebensraum. info).

"Out and about with rangers – looking for tracks in the winter world"

At first glance, the snow-covered slopes and mountain forests of the nature park look pristine. Upon closer inspection, the tracks left behind by black grouse, mountain rabbits, chamoix, indicate that sensitive animals have their habitat here. People also leave traces behind: be it during leisure time or in the management of forests and meadows. The regular snowshoe hiking trip with a nature park ranger is the ideal opportunity to take some time out from everyday life and to sharpen the senses and eyes for the many marks that both people and animals have made here.

CULTURE

The reflective Advent season in Schwarzenberg, concerts, exhibitions and museums: the calendar of events promises an exciting mix of styles, even in the winter.

Modernism and tradition

If a ranking of the most significant architectural regions in the world were to be drawn up today, Vorarlberg would, without a doubt, be in the top ten. However, this doesn't just mean the significance of the individual constructions, but also their number and density.

This phenomenon is comparatively new. Whilst it is true that Vorarlberg's baroque master builders are a fixed feature in specialist literature, whenever the Vorarlberg school of architecture or architects are mentioned. they mean the generation born since 1950 which has been influencing the architecture here for about the past 30 years. Without counting the handful of pioneers that preceded them, this amounts to over 60 people: considering the 400,000 inhabitants, this is an amazing number. Such a ratio is only possible in a region where architecture is appreciated, where one in four houses is designed by architects.

From construction artists to architects

However, this is the result, rather than the explanation, of a development. "Construction artists" is what the players called themselves at the start since, in the face of a vehement conflict with the "establishment" of the building industry and chamber, the title "architect" was refused. According to one of the pioneers, public appearances, the joining of forces and dialogue were important right from the start. The ideal founded in terms of social policy social, affordable, sustainable, regional - promoted the solidarity of a generation that was searching for new life forms and other ways of cultural expression, that was resisting the sell-out of their land, and that found expression in building. The new type of architecture started off in residential buildings - by way of examining already existing buildings or as a new structure, often for residential groups - and grew into a clear sign of the cultural restoration which soon extended to the economic elite and the public sector. However, as important as this environment was, there are always people who take responsibility, and Eberle, Gnaiger, Dietrich, Kaufmann and Ritsch have long since become international stars with chairs at renowned universities.

Landscape and wooden buildings

Located somewhat off the beaten track, the Bregenzerwald was part of this development, although in a way of its own. In contrast to the densely populated, industrial and commercial Rhine Valley with its mainly suburban structure, landscape, nature and rural craftsmanship culture is of great importance in the Bregenzerwald. Outside of the Bregenzerwald, groups of houses and farms dominate, whereas inside the Bregenzerwald it is the single-ridge house, outside of the Bregenzerwald it is households which commission the building, whereas inside the Bregenzerwald it is the young craftsmen. The Bregenzerwälder have a greater affinity for craftsmanship in general (Werkraum Bregenzerwald  $\rightarrow$  page 82): for example, it is in the carpentry trade that the Kaufmann family of architects has its roots. While, following the initial years, the formal experiment is in demand outside, the tendency towards stringency and sobriety increases inside. Rural pragmatism and the discipline of construction with timber, which is now state-of-the-art, appears to be more effective here. Recently, examining the old buildings is also gaining in importance. Above all, however, the new buildings fit in with the surrounding landscape with regard to material, size and proportion. Is it this attitude that shies at the eccentric and that searches for the typical rather than the unique which guarantees this way of building a wide basis? In any case, good carpentry firms now build residential buildings which architects in other places wouldn't be capable of building: it is these houses which graze casually in the field like the cattle which are as typical of the region as the farmhouses and the churches.

Worth a visit

It is hard to list remarkable buildings, since many of them are private residential buildings which are not accessible. However, a walk through Bizau, Hittisau or Schwarzenberg can satisfy your curiosity.

Umgang Bregenzerwald  $\rightarrow$  page 80

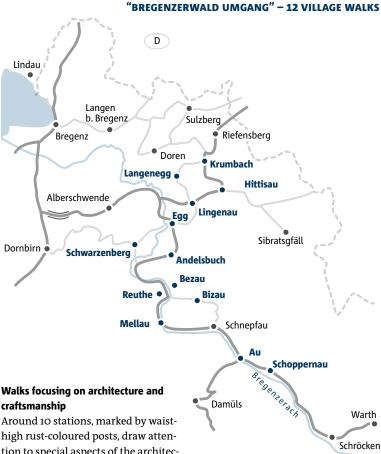

Discovering architecture and craftsmanship

The way people in the Bregenzerwald deal with their environment is the subject of specially marked paths through the villages of the region. Take these paths and, by observing selected objects, experience how people here have shaped their lives, and continue to shape them.

The way we treat each other and the world (German: "Umgang") needs constant updating. This is the aim of our "Umgang Bregenzerwald". It is intended to train awareness and an understanding of the world. From 1050, people settled here and gradually took ownership of the valley and mountains. What we admire here as the natural environment is the result of centuries of farming in the valley, on the mountain pastures (the "Vorsäß"; middle level of alpine farming) and the high mountain pasture. The "Umgang Bregenzerwald" draws our attention to the buildings, tools and everyday objects that have developed here over the course of time. And now, the valley is changing from a merely rural region into a sort of new suburb of the "Rhine City", which reaches from Bludenz to Bregenz.

This offers us a glimpse of the towns of the future: resilient, durable settlements that count both agricultural production and recovery as well as leisure pursuits and tourism amongst their functions. Sustainable building is already well established in the Bregenzerwald today, and the raw materials for the timber houses are obtained locally. This also applies increasingly for catering establishments and craft workshops. Anyone who follows all 12 trails of the "Umgang Bregenzerwald" will realise sometime that these are not village walks; instead, they are a practical training in future urban life. Town planners will find inspiration for the cities of tomorrow here. Perhaps they may also come up with ideas as to how suburbs such as the Bregenzerwald can be provided with transport links to the other parts of the "Rhine City" that are more sustainable. Walking would be best. But as the "Umgang Bregenzerwald" shows, this is a very time-consuming, albeit very beautiful form of transport. Without noise. It also protects the environment which, in the town of the future, will be within its own boundaries, not out in the country.

tion to special aspects of the architecture, craftsmanship and the cultivated landscape on each of the 12 village walks. The walks take between 1.5 and four hours depending on the village. The route and details about the objects have been described in an accompanying folder which is available from the local tourist offices and from Bregenzerwald Tourismus. The village walks in Schoppernau, Mellau, Bizau, Andelsbuch, Hittisau, Krumbach remain open throughout the winter.

The following trails are only partially open in winter: Au, Bezau/Reuthe, Schwarzenberg, Egg, Lingenau, Langenegg. Information about a winter-suitable version is available at the tourist office or from the host.

TIP: Guided village tours

Guided village tours take place every Friday from January to April. Registration for the guided tours until 5 p.m. the day before at the respective tourist office. The guided tours start at 9.30 a.m. at the respective tourist office and last for around two hours. Participation is free of charge.

Werkraum Haus in Andelsbuch

Werkraum Bregenzerwald

The Bregenzerwald is not only famed for its modern wooden architecture – its workshops also take new paths. They combine old skills and the traditional use of forms with contemporary design. Their inventive, high-quality products are in demand internationally. Around 90 of the most innovative workshops from the carpenter through to the light designer - have merged to create the Werkraum Bregenzerwald. As a joint platform, the Werkraum Bregenzerwald organises exhibitions, competitions and talks. The association has joined forces with the commercial colleges in Bezau to run the Werkraum Schule Bregenzerwald for young and upcoming crafts- and tradespeople. The Werkraum Bregenzerwald has been listed in the international UNESCO register for good practical examples for the maintenance and continuation of intangible cultural assets since 2016.

Werkraum Haus

The Werkraum Haus opened its doors in the centre of Andelsbuch in the summer of 2013. The building was planned by the renowned Swiss architect Peter Zumthor. It was actually built by the members of the Werkraum Bregenzerwald workshops known and appreciated by Peter Zumthor due to long-term cooperation. The visionary design is based on two keynotes. On the one hand, the hall-like building serves as a meeting place. On the other hand, it is a huge showcase for presenting the culture of craftsmanship in the Bregenzerwald.

This idea is expressed in a wide protruding roof made of wood and a façade made of glass. There is no division between the interior and the exterior, and the landscape is allowed to flow through the building.

Exhibitions

The Werkraum Haus is the venue for changing presentations of products from the workshops of the member companies as well as themed exhibitions focusing on the culture of the craftsmen's trades and architecture.

Consultancy and shop

The Werkraum Haus is the place to find out more about the craftsmen's trades in the Bregenzerwald region. Contacts can be established with the member companies on request. Regional hand-crafted products and relevant technical literature are available from the shop.

Restaurant

The Werkraum Haus brings regional artisan culture and hospitality under a single roof at its Werkraum Küche (Werkraum Kitchen). The kitchen also serves drinks and home-made cakes in addition to the small dishes that are available at lunchtime.

Events and seminars

Numerous in-house events are also organised at the Werkraum Haus. It's possible on request to hire the building for training sessions, lectures and other events. Educational programmes for children and young people are also available on request depending on the exhibition. Dates: www.werkraum.at

Bus stop Moos, Rintala Eggertsson Architects

Architects from seven different countries are designing seven different bus stops in Krumbach: small buildings for the good of the public. However, this is only one aspect of a courageous project. The other is an unusual dialogue with Vorarlberg tradition, building culture and craftsmanship.

Krumbach is well-known for its scenic beauty and a lively pub culture. In recent years, the village has made a name of itself with its multi-award-winning architecture. Most recently with the bus:stop krumbach project: in cooperation with the Architekturzentrum Wien and the Vorarlberg Architektur Institut, seven architectural firms from Russia, Spain, Belgium, Norway, Japan, China and Chile were invited to design seven bus stops.

In close cooperation with local craftsmen and regional partner architects, seven bus stops were built in 2014 – as a tribute to the use of traditional materials, skilled manufacturing techniques and the landscape. And to that which continues to characterise the region: the interplay of man and nature, of tradition and the modern age, of craftsmanship and building culture.

The Bregenzerwald locals are masters in the art of cheese and cuisine. The Bregenzerwald KäseStrasse with its selection of enjoyable stations is dedicated to the subject of cheese. The chefs in the multi award-winning restaurants and inns skilfully master the art of cooking.

Jagdgasthaus Egender in Schönenbach

Whether it's a restaurant, an inn or a café, at the top of a mountain or in village surroundings: the Bregenzerwald boasts many destinations for pleasure-seekers. Those who wish to cook for themselves may source delicious ingredients from the region.

Fancy an out-of-the-ordinary breakfast, a midday snack, tempting sweets, a hearty snack or a gourmet menu from an award-winning kitchen? Those who enjoy good food will find what they're looking for in the Bregenzerwald. That's because hosts in the Bregenzerwald do their utmost to provide for the culinary well-being of their guests and do so with a pleasing variety of dishes. The options extend from innovative cuisine to such down-to-earth offerings as the typical Käsknöpfle (cheese dumplings). International food is also available, from pizza to burgers.

Harmonious ambience

The different locations alone make culinary explorations worthwhile. Visitors may sit in a cosy Bregenzerwald lounge, surrounded by woodpanelled walls. Or delight in the modern ambience in the style of contemporary wooden architecture. Delicacies and the atmosphere may be enjoyed elsewhere in gardens, on terraces at the top of mountains with the best views or in front of alpine huts

Frau Kaufmann: Learn home-style cooking

At "Frau Kaufmann", a four-course meal is cooked according to old recipes, either true to the original or with a few contemporary changes. All participants attend each course, either cooking or watching. The individual meals are eaten as soon as they are ready. Suitable wines are served.

Fine ingredients

Ingredients sourced from the region are given centre stage wherever possible. Bregenzerwälder alpine and mountain cheese is used to enhance many a dish. Cream cheese is delicious both as an appetiser and in desserts. Meat, ham and sausage specialities are supplied by butchers who work closely with local farmers. Fish is procured from sustainable sources in the Bregenzerwald or from Lake Constance. Fruit, vegetables and herbs originate in Vorarlberg and the Lake Constance region or from local gardens.

The dedicated group of gardeners here, for example, include the Hotel Post in Bezau and the Biohotel Schwanen in Bizau. They launched the 'Solidarische Landwirtschaft Land.Wird' communityfarming project and jointly manage a 4,000-square-metre vegetable, fruit and herb garden with partners from the region. The 'Schulhus' and 'Krumbacher Stuba' moorland innkeepers in Krumbach are experts in refining dishes and drinks with plants and herbs from the local moor.

Excellent kitchens

Which restaurants and inns in the Bregenzerwald have received awards from gourmet guides? Gourmets in Austria are able to consult three guides. The Gault & Millau Guide has awarded toques to several kitchens in the Bregenzerwald. Some chefs are pleased to be awarded the stars from the Á la Carte Guide. The Falstaff Restaurant Guide, which rates cuisine and service with a maximum of 100 points, also offers good orientation. This guide does not rely on a jury of experts - the ratings are awarded by members of the Gourmet Club.

Delightful selection

Those spending their holidays in apartments may also treat themselves to breakfast in a hotel, café or mountain restaurant for a change. These eateries offer, for example, a selection of Bregenzerwald cheese and cold-cut specialities, egg dishes, muesli, home-made products such as bread, jams, juices and smoothies. Some breakfast menus even include 'Riebel', a traditional Vorarlberg speciality prepared from Riebel maize semolina.

Wolfgang Mätzler from Andelsbuch offers an award-winning to-go menu in jars for lunch or dinner under the name of 'fairkocht'. His range includes soups, veal goulash, sugo with and without meat, paprika chicken, sauerkraut, apple sauce and much more.

The 'Sonntagsgasthaus' in Egg-Großdorf is a special address for lunch on Sundays. It is, as the name suggests, only open on Sundays. Top chefs take turns at the cookers with hobby cooks.

Buying regionally

Those who like to cook for themselves or wish to take culinary souvenirs home with them will be happy to look around the many gourmet specialists. For example, in alpine dairies ( $\rightarrow p$ . 98), fine distilleries, delicatessen shops and farm-gate shops.

The range at Sutterlüty - a Bregenzerwald-based supermarket - also includes many regional products. The Käsehaus (Cheese House) in Andelsbuch is open seven days a week. Besides its large selection of cheeses, it also offers many other specialities from the Bregenzerwald and neighbouring regions. Homemade delicacies - from honey to fine spirits - as well as culinary delights from associated artisan producers are available at 'Bentele Genuss' in Alberschwende. Cheese as well as whey-based drinks and care products are available from the Metzler family's open farm in Egg(→ p. 95). It's possible to combine dining and shopping at the 'Ernele', a shop and gastro outlet that's run by Romantik Hotel Das Schiff in Hittisau. Everything that's available there is sourced from within a radius of no more than 100 kilometres.

Falzalpen cheese cellar in Egg-Schetteregg

How come a valley community in which, a century ago, Sunday dinner comprised a sort of wheat flour mash (with maize grits the rest of the week) is now a gourmet region with specialities whose origins are protected and where refined gastronomy is at home in many restaurants?

The Bregenzerwald is an Austrian gourmet region. These days, the word "gourmet" is used all too frequently in advertising: however, the expression "gourmet region" has a specific meaning: it is a registered brand by the Austrian Ministry for Food and the AMA (Agrarmarkt Austria), wishing to remind consumers of regional specialities. The basic prerequisites are that the ingredients come from the region, that production is regional, and that the products are firmly rooted in regional gastronomy. In the Bregenzerwald, this means alpine cheese. Every year, approximately 5,000 tons of alpine cheese are produced in the valley's 15 dairies. Every year, 200 tons of alpine cheese are handmade by the 64 dairy alps every summer. The special thing about this cheese is the silo-free milk it is produced from, since only 3% of EU dairy farmers produce in this way, i.e. their cows never eat silo fodder instead, between May and October, they only eat grass and herbs. During the winter, they only eat the air-dried hay from valley meadows. In the socalled three-stage farming method, following their winter in the barn, the animals graze on the mountain pastures located at medium height (around 900 m) during the spring and the autumn, and on the high mountain pasture during the summer. The mountain pastures are run as a collective, since the farmers only have an average of 12 cows in the barn.

The three-stage farming method (which was included in the national UNESCO list of immaterial cultural assets in spring 2011) in particular gives the alpine cheese the special flavour which means it can easily contend with the well-known European full-fat cheeses. It has been like this for a long time: back at the start of the 19th century, the inhabitants of the Bregenzerwald sold over 30.000 kg of cheese to the monarchy and abroad. In 1877, Karl von Seyffertitz wrote: "Everywhere including in the cheerful Vorderwald, in Hittisau and Lingenau, you will meet a unique people in strange national dress in wood-panelled parlours with floors scrubbed white, with shiny door handles - the men busy looking after a dairy breed of cow and overseeing the production of a popular, world-famous fine cheese, the women busy with elaborate whitework embroidery." However, it wasn't the producers back then who made all the money - it was the sellers. The Schnepfau local Josef Ambros Moosbrugger, for example, made so much profit from selling cheese that he could afford a city palace in Milan. No doubt he dined differently to the people back home, where cooking over an open fire resulted above all in simple pan-fried dishes such as the "Riebel" and the "Schwozermuas". Up on the alp, flour, salt, butter, quark and cheese were the main ingredients. The recipe for "Schwozermus" - named for the woodcutters from Schwaz was: "Water, flour, salt, dripping - and that's it!" The lack of bread on the alp gave rise to the "Käsknöpfle", to "Sig", known only in the Bregenzerwald and which is caramelised lactose, since they wanted to make a further product from the whey. The passage of this modest alp fare to the current first-class restaurants in the Bregenzerwald – which now use over 60 regional types of cheese – went through a series of changes which demanded quality rather than quantity. These include the 1997 EU Protection of Origin of alpine and mountain cheeses, the establishment of the "KäseStrasse Bregenzerwald" in 1998 as a network of farmers, alpine dairies, craftsmen, publicans and businesses, the "Gourmet region" of the Bregenzerwald" in 2005, the Vorarlberg quality marketing "luag druf" in 2005, the inclusion of Bregenzerwald mountain cheese into the "Ark of taste" by Slow Food 2008, and the "Bregenzerwald Gourmet Days" by the KäseStrasse in July 2009. The toughest taste test is still the most regional however: every year, alpine and mountain cheese is judged in Schwarzenberg. The winner at this event is enough to satisfy any gourmet's taste buds.

TIP: KÄSESTRASSE & TASTING

The KäseStrasse Bregenzerwald is an association of farmers and alps, alpine dairy farmers and cheesemakers, cheesemongers and restaurants, museums and cable car operators, members of the tourism industry and partners from the worlds of trade and commerce. The over 180 partners which make up the KäseStrasse network are joined together in the objective of maintaining and preserving taste and regional culture.

Programme: "World of enjoyment in the Bregenzerwald Cheese Cellar in Lingenau "

WELLNESS & HEALTH

Who doesn't occasionally long for a retreat, for a leisurely pace, for stimuli which pamper the body and soul? The Bregenzerwald is such a retreat.

Wellness with a view at Hotel Holand in Au

Recharging your batteries and giving yourself a treat: the health and wellness hotels in the Bregenzerwald create the right atmosphere for holidays that help you feel good. With subtle architecture, well thought-out offers and attentive hospitality.

Those wanting to give their bodies, minds and souls a treat while on holiday will certainly find what they're looking for in the Bregenzerwald. Well-being is ensured by medically sound programmes, classic wellness offers, finely adapted menus and the appropriate ambience. Most health and wellness hotels are distinguished by their architecture and high-quality furnishings. Many bathing and sauna worlds have been newly built or modernised in the style of contemporary Vorarlberg (timber) architecture in recent years. Nice and bright, with views into natural landscapes, built with such natural materials as wood and stone.

Spas and therapies

The programmes that are available at the health hotels range from supervised fasting and detoxification weeks to packings and baths with, for example, freshly cut moor. The most traditional is Gesundhotel Bad Reuthe, which also offers medical and physio-therapeutic care.

Relaxation and refreshment

The wellness hotels offer a wide range of activities - from fitness programmes and yoga retreats to massages and cosmetic treatments. Hotel Post by Susanne Kaufmann even treats visitors to the hotelier's own line of high-quality natural cosmetics. Several other wellness hotels also use the Bregenzerwald's own care products – for instance, the whey-care line by the Metzler family from Egg or the Werbina honey-care line by Bentele Genuss

Well-being days: swimming and sweating

Several health and wellness hotels open their swimming and sauna areas to visitors who just want to spend the day or a few hours there.

Yoga promotes flexibility, enhances attentiveness, develops an activating and relaxing effect. Several options exist for visitors wishing to take yoga classes during their stay in the Bregenzerwald.

Yoga is the perfect complement for people who enjoy exercise, such as hiking, climbing and skiing. The poses keep muscles, tendons and joints supple and strengthen them at the same time. Yoga practitioners learn to breathe with awareness and to direct their attention to the here and now. A feeling of both relaxation and restoration sets in after time spent practising yoga.

In hotels and studios

The options for yoga fans have grown steadily in the Bregenzerwald over recent years. Some of the wellness hotels offer yoga classes throughout the year, also for guests not staying at those specific hotels. Experienced yoga instructors at several locations are happy to welcome beginners and experienced practitioners to their classes and individual lessons. Styles taught range from classical yoga to hot yoga, hormone yoga for women and yoga for children.

reisemagazin

bregenzerwald

The Bregenzerwald travel magazine is published twice a year and contains stories and reports about the people and their culture in this region. The writers, some of whom live in Vorarlberg and some of whom work internationally, provide insights into what life in the Bregenzerwald is all about and what brings them pleasure and enjoyment. Available from Bregenzerwald Tourismus and from the tourist information offices in the Bregenzerwald. Also available online at www.bregenzerwald.at

She protects the forest and animals

Young hunter Isabella Deuring describes her tasks in the forest and what she appreciates about hunting. It's important to her to make winter-sports enthusiasts more aware of how to behave in a way that's appropriate for animals in winter.

Walser Gold

They are family and both have made winter-sports history. Hubert (father) and Johannes (son) Strolz have both won gold in downhill skiing at a Winter Olympics. The two men from the Walser region share what else they get up to in "Walser Gold"

A village like a ski club

The ski club in the small village of Reuthe is about much more than just winter sports. Residents use the club to get involved and as their village's centre of sport and culture. Something that the children in particular appreciate very much.

Women who love cross-country skiing

Eight women from the Bregenzerwald are already out on the cross-country ski trail while others are still in bed. Their early sporting fun takes in the Grenzland-loipe from Hittisau to Balderschwang with, of course, stops at inns along the way too.

A barn as top architecture

The music teacher, organist and geographer Rudolf Berchtel in Bezau inherited his childhood home, including its photo studio and archive. Formerly a barn, then converted into a studio by legendary architect Leopold Kaufmann, the architects Innauer/Matt have now turned it into an architecture studio. One that also includes an apartment for Rudolf Berchtel too.

The good spirit in the bottle

Oliver Huber works on fine spirits at one of the oldest distilleries in the Bregenzerwald. And he's now achieving international success with them. The 50 spirits that he makes also include a famous dry gin. It's where the taste of summer gets bottled.
